

Jessica Taylor
Dr. Worley
ENG 207 01
Flash Fiction - 80 words

Unnoticed Sound

Music flows, but with no ears to hear it, the notes fall sharp and toxic. Audio is left to find home where no one will recognize it. It wilts the dandelions, the weeds, the grass; nothing can exist without leaving its mark. Sound waves push against the nearby butterfly, poisoning the world around. Because everything makes its impact one way or another, and when the sweetest of sounds are ignored, they have to turn sour to get people to listen.